Membership Terms & Conditions

- MEA helps members resolve their workplace-related questions and issues. In doing so, MEA endeavors to provide current, detailed and useful information, but MEA does not provide legal advice or guidance through the information it provides, its programs, its "Expert Hotline" service, or in any other manner. Members should always consult legal counsel before taking any action or making any decision that requires legal advice or may have legal implications. MEA can assist members in locating counsel with the appropriate expertise.
- MEA does not sell its membership lists to third parties. However, MEA may use member names for MEA promotional purposes utilizing, for example, printed materials, the Internet and other media.
- MEA has the right to deny membership to any applicant or terminate membership of any member for any reason MEA thinks appropriate.
- MEA provides proprietary information solely for the use of its members. Members and their affiliated persons and companies may not resell or disseminate this information without MEA's written authorization. MEA may provide services to its members through MEA employees and consultants. During the term of their membership and for one year thereafter, members and their affiliated persons and companies may not directly or indirectly solicit for employment or hire MEA employees or consultants without MEA's written consent.
- Membership Dues in the Association may be tax deductible as an ordinary and necessary business expense. Consult with your tax advisor for more information.
